

ALLIES READY TO STORM FORTRESS

Advanced Works at the Dardanelles Are Taken From the Turks—Seven Thousand Are Killed in One Battle.

By Compton MacKenzie.
Famous Novelist and Dramatist, Officially accompanying the British Forces at the Dardanelles.

THE DARDANELLES (via London), July 2.—We are now in the position of having to storm an immense fortress, the advanced works of which, by an amazing feat of arms, we already hold. The Australians and New Zealanders have made a lodgment upon one of the strongest advanced works of the Kilit Bahr plateau. They threaten the communications of the fortress and are drawing against them a large part of the garrison which is composed of the flower of the Turkish army. Notwithstanding their casualties of 7,000 the troops are fighting with gallantry and desperation.

On the night of June 11-12, there was a brilliant little action by a regiment of South Wales borderers, which resulted in a gain of two trenches. On June 16 the enemy, led by a Turkish-German officer, made an assault on the trenches of the 88th brigade, but were driven off with loss.

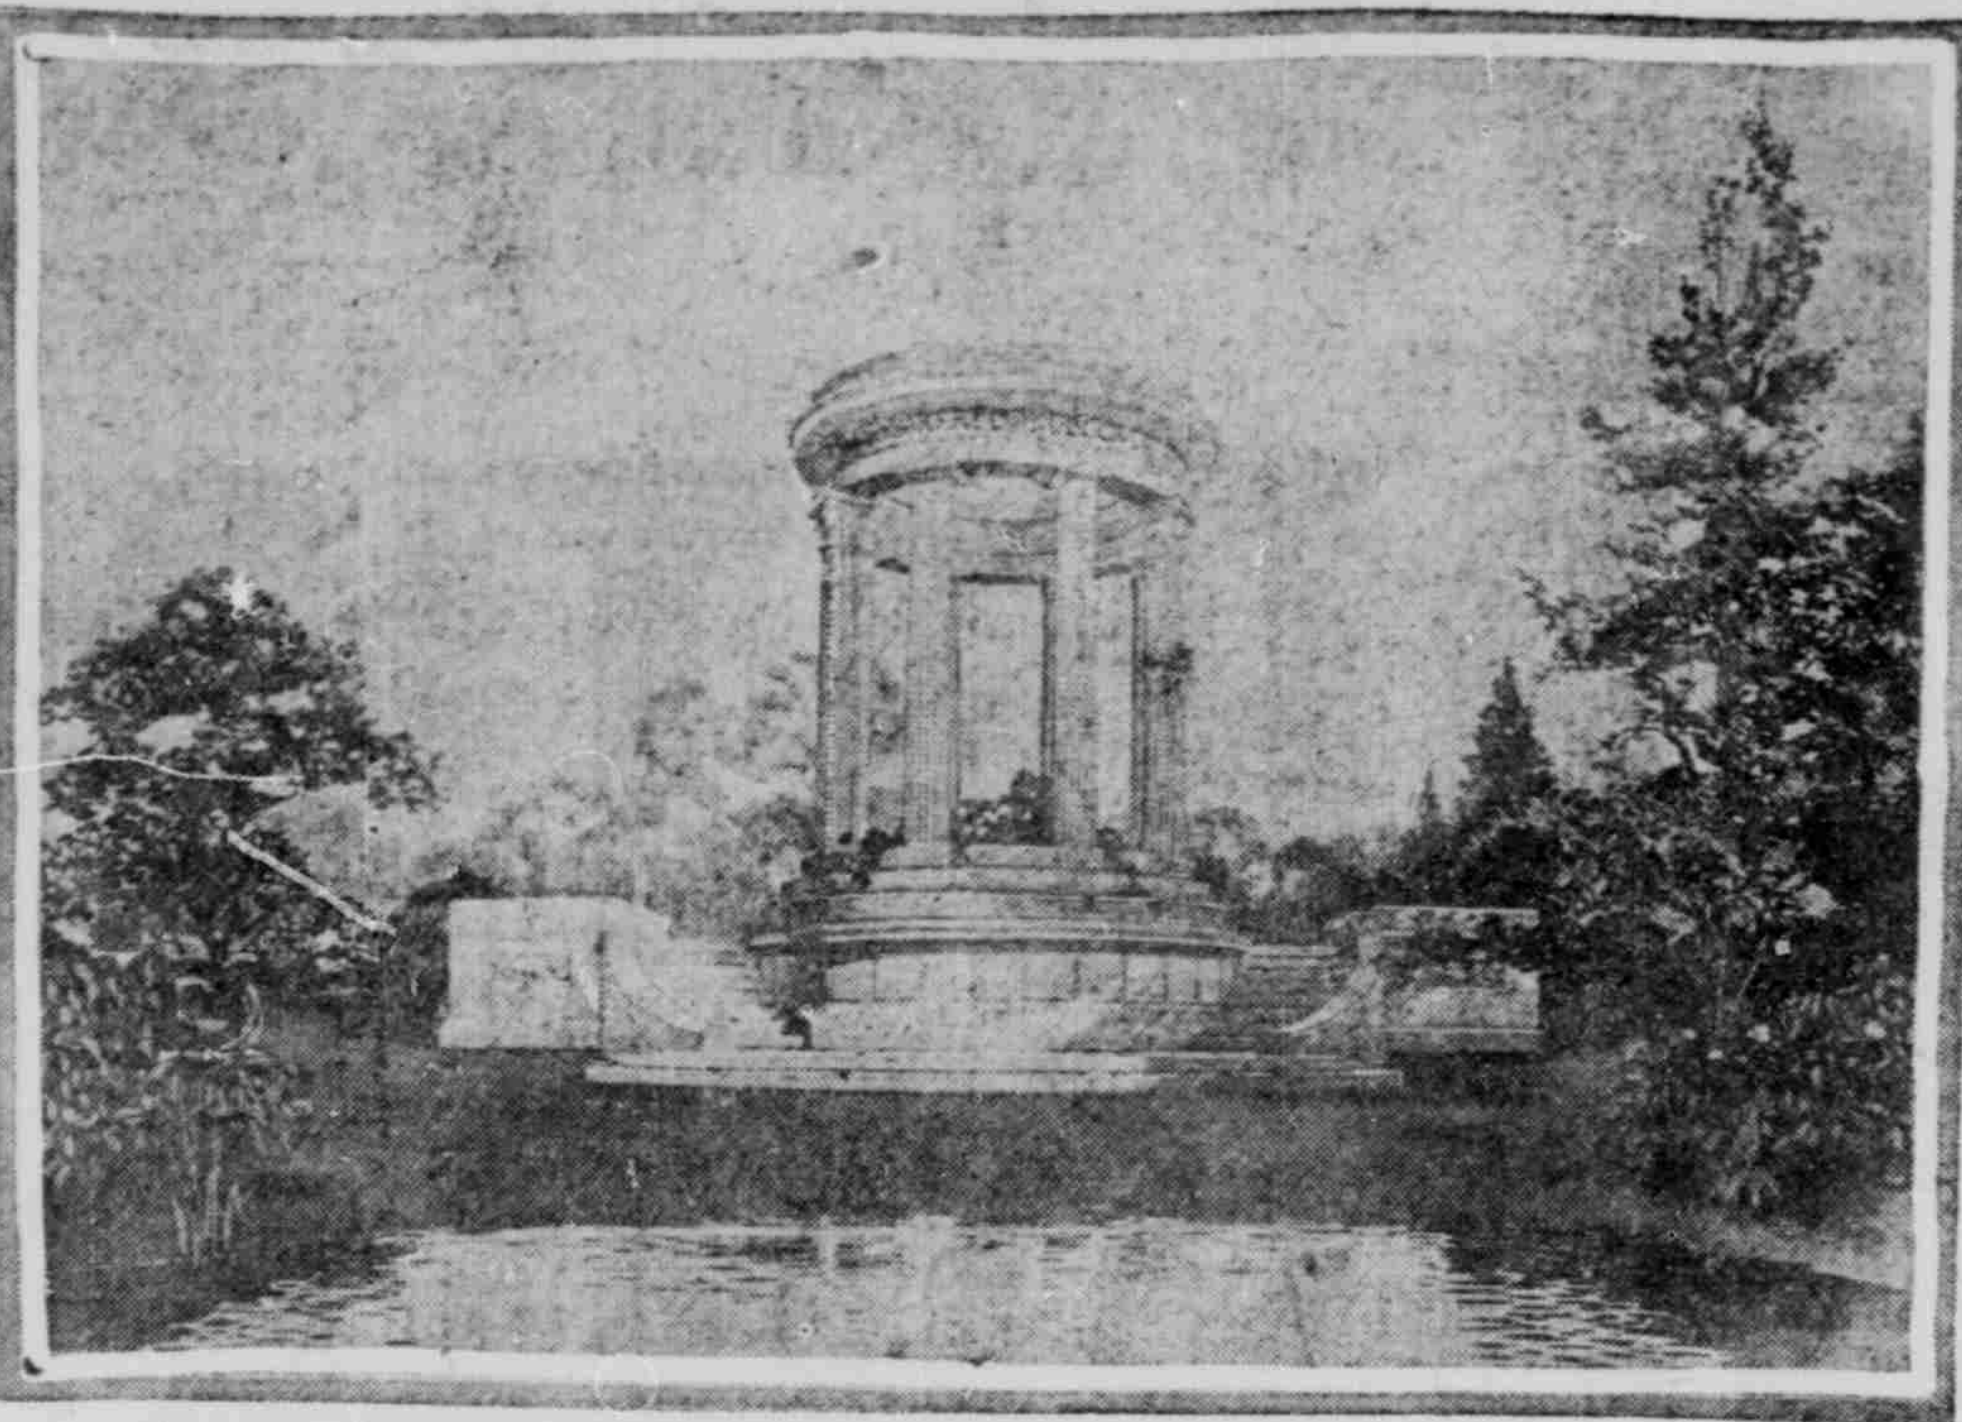

On June 21 it was determined to strengthen the line upon the extreme right. All through the morning the cannonade proceeded by noon the second division of the French had, on the left, stormed and captured all the Turkish trenches of the first two lines. On the right the first division after reaching their objective had fallen back. Again they advanced and again took the trenches and again they were driven out.

At this moment a message was sent to say the trenches must be recaptured and held. British guns and howitzers were asked for and left at once. The bombardment was resumed and continued throughout the afternoon. At half past five it seemed as though every gun on earth was pouring shells into the Turkish lines.

At 6 o'clock the third assault was delivered. In one trench there was a temporary shortage of ammunition. The enemy fought even with stones and sticks. The first battalion came hurrying up from the Turkish right to reinforce; they were caught on open ground by the drumming 75's and melted away.

Six hundred yards of Turkish trenches were taken and still the bombardment continued in order to ward off the counter-attack anticipated. The Turkish casualties were at least 7,000. One trench 200 yards long and 10 feet deep was brimming over with dead.

ENEMIES TO SALOONS ARE IN CONVENTION

Declares For a Non-Partisan, Non-Secretarian and Patriotic Campaign.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., July 2.—

The Anti-Saloon league of America in convention here Thursday declared for a nonpartisan, nonsecretarian and patriotic campaign. It is considered that this platform embodies defiance to the prohibition party whose leader, Eugene W. Chaffin, twice presidential candidate of the prohibition ticket, is on his way to attend the conference and demand an accounting.

The Rev. P. A. Baker, general superintendent of the league, said Thursday that more than 800 men and women are regularly employed in the campaign to abolish saloons and that more than $1,250,000 was spent in national and state work last year. He also said that there was no way of knowing what the liquor interests spent to fight the league, but that Texas alone spent $1,000,000 to prevent the state going "dry" and in the campaign in which Virginia voted against liquor the "interests" spent $600,000 as against $84,000 paid out by the Anti-Saloon league.

W. G. Robinson of St. Louis, editor of the National Issue, the prohibition organ, said Eugene W. Chaffin would advocate the passage of a law by congress prohibiting the sale of liquor instead of advocating a constitutional amendment for the same purpose.

The prohibition delegates will refuse to attend the dinner at the Hotel Rudolph next Tuesday night, it was said, because the hotel has a liquor license. The leaders, however, hold that this is a narrow view and will not gain friends for the cause, which they are developing on practical business lines.

SCHOOL GARDEN SAVES MANY BOYS AND GIRLS

Dr. C. D. Jarvis Holds Active Experience Necessary to School Studies.

By Victor Elliott.

WASHINGTON, July 2.—School children need some kind of active experience to give life to their school studies.

That is the principle upon which the school-garden idea is based, according to Dr. C. D. Jarvis of the United States bureau of education.

Various welfare leagues, the International Child-Welfare league in particular, are advocating the school-garden movement. They believe that through it thousands of boys and girls may be saved from the evils attending confinement in shops, mills and mines.

To satisfy the demand for some definite information on the subject, Dr. Jarvis points out, the United States bureau of education recently conducted a survey of the school-garden work throughout the country.

As a result of this survey a plan for the introduction and promotion of garden work in the schools has been made available to school officials. Summing up the survey, Dr. Jarvis says:

"The plan is a simple one. It is an economical one. It does not in any way interfere with the present school program. It provides for intelligent instruction and thorough supervision. It provides for the utilization of unused land and labor for productive purposes. The children working under this plan may contribute to the support of the family, teaching them the fundamental principles of democracy and enabling them to remain longer in school.

"An additional result of the plan in operation is an improvement of home surroundings—back yards are cleaned up and the home grounds ornamented with shrubbery and flower borders.

"The plan provides for a system of home gardening in each city graded school.

"The home garden has many advantages over the so-called school garden, where a large number of children are brought together and each given a small plot of ground on which to plant a few pennies worth of seeds.

"The child's garden in the home back yard, when under school supervision, will supply every opportunity offered by the school garden and will do much more.

"It assures a closer relationship between home and school and promises a better understanding between parent and teacher.

"It obviates many of the troubles of the school garden, such as that of stealing, fencing, protection, limited funds, summer vacation, insufficient land, and others.

"The home garden furthermore usually provides sufficient ground to grow enough produce to supply the home and to put the enterprise on a commercial or business basis.

"The child with a fair-sized garden is able to raise at least $10 worth of produce and to obtain a fair idea of the possibilities of gardening. Such a position tends to broaden the child's vision.

"The home garden also is usually large enough to keep the child occupied while out of school and at an occupation that is wholesome and under the eye of the parents."
